TITLE: CAROLINE SAUL PRESENTS FORWARD THINKING RECYCLED MILK BOTTLE SCULPTURE IN MUNICH

Caroline Saul recent graduate of Brighton University exhibits at prestigious international design fair Talente.

Talente is an esteemed showcase of emerging world-class design talent from around the globe. It runs from the 11th to 17th March 2009 and attracts industry professionals and design enthusiasts from all over the world. It has been held annually since 1980 as part of the International Trade Fair for the Skilled Trades in Munich, Germany.

The Crafts Council has once again acted as mentor for the highly acclaimed Talente exhibition. Makers are encouraged to apply for this celebrated competition, which reflects high quality talent put forward via a network of mentors from all over the world. Participants showcased are selected by a European jury. They are of a high standard reflecting the ideas of young people with an experimental approach to materials and craft techniques. Talente offers a European platform enabling new makers to launch their creative careers to the wider European market.

Caroline applies her training in traditional craft techniques to issues currently affecting society. With her forward thinking approach to recycling she reworks milk bottles into delicate lace like sculptural forms.

Caroline says "I am delighted to have been selected for an exhibition of this caliber. I feel it is very important to highlight sustainability issues within craft and design. I am very pleased to have an opportunity to do this on an international level.

My work is a process-led exploration of colour, texture, material, patterning, shape and form.

My passion lies with the creation of new materials from objects that might otherwise be thrown away. The development of my recycled plastics leads to the creation of pieces that work in both inside and outside spaces."
